Mr. Thomas M. Nichol, the prominent New York banker, is drinking Waukesha water fresh from the spring.

General Arthur still maintains the dignity of a gentleman. The alarming condition of the President does not turn his head.

To show that the Bourbon party in Virginia can be defeated if the anti-Bourbon vote will unite, it is only necessary to take the vote cast last year: Republican vote, 83,639; Readjuster Democratic vote, 31,527; combined anti-Bourbon vote, 115,166; Bourbon vote, 96,449; majority of combined anti-Bourbon vote over Bourbon vote, 18,717. Should the Republicans unite with the Mahone Readjusters, the worst party ever organized in Virginia would be defeated.

A new Scandinavian newspaper starts in life at La Crosse, with the announcement that it will make war on rings and monopolies, and be a Republican newspaper. Consistency thou art a jewyl.—Madison Democrat.

And the Madison Democrat claims that it is an independent paper—not bound to any party—and yet it ties itself to what little there is left of the Bourbon element and opposes everything which is not Democratic. O consistency, after the fashion of that practiced by the Madison Democrat, thou art a humbug.

Connecticut is furnishing the country with another mysterious murder which will become as notable as the tragic death of Mary Stannard. The victim this time is Jennie Cramer, the most beautiful girl in New Haven, and the daughter of a German cigar maker. She was about eighteen years old, and was frequently attended by Walter and James Malley, of a wealthy family. One week ago last Saturday her body was found on the Sound shore, six miles from New Haven, bearing the indication that she had been murdered. A telegram says "the body plainly had been but a short time in the water and looked very natural. The face was discolored. A bruise on the forehead looked as though it might have been make by the sand. Her left ear and lip were slightly cut, and the mouth bore a pale stain of blood. There were slight bruises on her right shoulder also." When the body was found the Malley boys were arrested being charged with the murder. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide, but the boys will be held to trial, and it is thought the testimony will show that they have some knowledge as to how Jennie Cramer came to her death. A reward of $2,000 is offered for any clue that will lead to the arrest of the murderers.

The North American Review for September opens with a profoundly philosophical article on "The Church, the State, and the School," by Prof. William T. Harris. M. J. Savage treats of "Natural Ethics," showing that the principles of morality are rooted in man's nature, and the products of evolution; consequently, that they are not affected by the vicissitudes of dogma or religious creeds. The Hon. John A. Kasson gives a history of the "Monroe Declaration," and proves that the cardinal doctrine of American statesmanship is due to John Quincy Adams. The Rev. Edward Everett Hale writes of the "Taxation of Church Property." He would have all churches taxed in form, but would exempt in practice those which by their charitable work help to lighten the public burdens. The other articles in this number of the Review are "Jewish Ostracism in America," by Nina Morais: "The decay of New England Thought," by Rev. Julius H. Ward; "Ghost Seeing" by Prof. F. H. Hedge; and "Factitious History," by Rossiter Johnson. The latter article is a scathing criticism of Jefferson Davis' recently published historical memoir. Fifty cents per copy. Five dollars per year. Address, "The North American Review, New York, N. Y."

THE CARPENTER MEMORIAL.

The executive committee of the Carpenter memorial association met in Milwaukee on Tuesday evening, and made some little progress toward making the necessary arrangements to procure subscriptions to the fund which shall be used in erecting a monument to the memory of the late Matthew H. Carpenter. There have been about 300 local committees appointed throughout the State to raise subscriptions to the memorial fund. It has been decided by the executive committee that the best way to raise this fund and at the same time to make the subscriptions within the reach of every one, is to issue certificates of membership of the memorial association, handsomely engraved, and bearing an portrait of Senator Carpenter. About 15,000 of these will be issued, and one will be given to each person who contributes to the fund one dollar. It is likely the memorial fund will reach far more than $15,000, but to give the common people an opportunity to subscribe to the fund, it was thought best to adopt the certificate plan.

The rules and regulations governing the matter are as follows, and should be carefully heeded by all persons intending to become members of the Carpenter memorial association:

Each donor is requested to sign his name to the subscription list, as it is designed to preserve the autographs thus obtained. Any donor may also sign and subscribe for any member of his family.

Each person contributing one dollar to the memorial fund will receive a certificate of membership signed by the president, Wm. E. Smith, and the secretary, Frank A. Flower, and containing a portrait of Matthew Hale Carpenter.

Local committees shall have power to appoint sub-committees, or assistants, in their respective counties to aid in collecting subscriptions, and to endorse upon the back each certificate of membership given out.

No portion of the donations to the memorial fund shall be expended for any purpose whatsoever.

All donations, together with the list of donors, shall be transmitted once each week to Geo. G. Houghton, Milwaukee, Wis. Individuals who send contributions should direct to Mr. Houghton and enclose three cents postage for return of certificate of membership.

The executive committe, is composed of some solid men—solid in energy, earnestness, and good judgment. It requires about $185.00 to pay for the 15,000 engraved certificates, and beside this item of expense, there were others which of necessity must be incurred before the certificates were ready for delivery, and all the machinery connected with the memorial fund in operation. It was agreed that not one cent of the amount given to the fund should be used in paying any bill whatsoever. In a few days or weeks the certificates will be furnished, and then the work of receiving subscriptions will be pushed with vigor.

THE PRESIDENT'S PHYSICIANS.

It is not to be wondered at that Mrs. Garfield is losing confidence in the physicians in attendance at the White House. There are quite a number of reasons why that unfortunate and sorely distressed woman should feel that the best has not been done in regard to treating the President. The Gazette appreciates the fact that it is no time to cast slurs, or doubt the ability and trustworthiness of the physicians who have been at the President's bedside for more than six weeks. It is easier to tear down than to build up. It is easy to find fault, to grumble, and to detect mistakes, than to mark out a safe and sure way. But some things have transpired which can not but hang to the mind. The people have been made believe for the past month that the President was out of danger. It has been repeatedly said by Dr. Bliss that the President would surely recover and that by the middle of August he would be able to take a sea voyage. From day to day he was "rapidly recovering," his condition was normal, his appetite excellent, his voice strong and his hand firm. Nearly every day brought some such expressions as these, until the country was led to believe that the President was well nigh a well man.

But while the people were indulging in strong hope and were led to believe that danger was a thing of the past, all at once there came the alarming intelligence that the President was in a very critical condition, and even the physicians had doubt of his recovery. The only accounting for this was that his stomach was out of order and there was the seat of danger. This argument may be plausible, but it is a striking blow at the President's medical advisers to let the fact become known that the President has lost from 70 to 80 pounds since he was shot; that the strong robust man is a mere skeleton, that the once rugged face beaming with intelligence and brightness, is pale, thin, and death-like; and that while these bulletins were daily being issued about the rapidly recovering President, he was in fact losing from one to two pounds of flesh per day! To be as charitable as one can be under the circumstances, we can not refrain from saying that a terrible blunder has been committed by some one, and it is quite natural that poor Mrs. Garfield, for whom the country has the tenderest regard and the deepest sympathy, should feel that the physicians have deceived her as they have the public.

It must be confessed that the physicians had a difficult case when the well nigh mortal wound of the President was placed in their hands. Since that time there has been a desperate struggle for life. The eyes of the world were turned toward Washington, and the intensest anxiety felt as to his recovery. The physicians could not be blamed if the wound proved fatal, but the people have reason to find fault with that course which led the country to believe that the President was out of danger when he was in fact gradually growing weaker.

NEBRAKA'S LICENSE LAW.

LINCOLN, Aug. 17—Since the Supreme Court decided the new license law to be constitutional, a good deal of talk has been indulged in as to the wisdom of such decision. There seems to be a misunderstanding in the matter. The argument on the constitutionality of the new law turned wholly upon the question whether the license was a mere tax or a police regulation. The Supreme Court decided that it was the latter, and consequently not obnoxious to the clause of the constitution requiring taxation to be uniform and equal, and based upon an equitable property valuation. In no respect, so far as this question is involved, does the new law differ from the old one.

THE PRESIDENT.

Special to the Gazette.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Aug. 18, 8 A. M.—The President has passed a very comfortable night, sleeping well the greater part of the time. There has been no further vomiting, and nutritive cremata are still retained. This morning his pulse is slower, and his general condition better than yesterday at the same hour. Pulse 104, temperature, 98.8, respiration 17.

ROBT. REXBURN,
D. H. AGNEW.

EXECUTIVE MANSION. August 18, 11 a. m.—The indications are that everything is progressing nicely in the sick room. Dr. Agnew left for Philadelphia on the limited express. He will probably return to-morrow in order that Dr. Hamilton may go to New York Saturday. Private Secretary Brown accompanied Dr. Agnew to the train and says he talked very encouragingly of the President's chances. Previous to leaving the mansion Dr. Agnew had a talk with Mrs. Garfield, and informed her he felt perfectly secure in being temporarily absent and that if an emergency should occur, he could easily be summoned. At this hour the President is resting quietly. About three quarters of an hour ago he took a small quantity of koumies which were given him by his wife, and up to this time no bad effects have been experienced from it and the patient is now sleeping.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Aug. 18—12:30 p. m.—The President has again taken a small quantity of koumess and retained it. He relishes nourishment and asks for more. He has partaken several times during the morning. At present there are no indications of his being disturbed by nausea.

A FAVORABLE DAY.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, Aug. 17, 11 p. m.—To-day has been a more favorable one than yesterday, and a general feeling of reassurance is gradually growing. The interest of the day has centered upon the condition of the President's stomach from time to time, and great encouragement has been derived from the fact that the nourishment taken naturally by the President has been retained, when it was decided to give the President a cooled infusion of beef.

The patient slept calmly on both occasions after taking nourishment. He awoke after the first nap without experiencing any annoyance from the irritability or weak condition of his stomach, but when he awoke the second time he remarked to the surgeons that he tasted the liquid, and this time he barely escaped being nauseated, and the symptoms showed the stomach would not bear anything further to-day.

One of the nurses explained the situation by saying, "I sponged the President quickly, and told him not to think of his stomach and he would be all right. This suggestion, it appears, was complied with, and the disturbances passed away, and no vomiting occurred. Dr. Bliss said it was then determined that it would be best not to attempt the administration of any further nourishment by means of enemater for the present.

The hope of the night is founded upon the action of the patient's stomach, and as it gains strength, confidence in his recovery increases, and vice versa.

RAYS OF HOPE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—The facility with which the deepest gloom may be dissipated by the slightest ray of hope was strikingly illustrated here this morning. When last evening the conclusion was almost universal that the President was lying almost at the point of death, the good news of the night when disseminated this morning had such a buoyant effect that the talked and acted as though the President was well again and entirely out of danger. It is true that among the more reflective here there was still anxiety, and the crowds that gathered before the windows, where the bulletins were displayed and in the hotel lobbies numbered a few persons who still refused to believe that the bright anticipations of their neighbors were to be realized. Still, there were many gentlemen of prominence whose opinion, from their position, was believed to have weight, who were confident that the President would not die. Conspicuous among these was Justice Harlan. At the Riggs house for a few minutes this afternoon he was the center of a knot of people who earnestly listened to what he had to say, after reading the morning bulletin and making his usual visit to the White House to inquire after the President's condition.

Said the Judge: "I am confident he will get well. His wound is healing rapidly. It is in splendid condition, and why should the irritation of a man's stomach kill him under such circumstances?"

While the Judge's logic was not in keeping with his reputation as a jurist, still his confident manner and almost vehement assertion bore conviction to the minds of many who heard him.

Virtue Acknowledged.

RUMORS OF A ROW.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—It is rumored to-night that the consulting physicians wished yesterday to draw out of the case, and that it took a great deal of urging on the part of Dr. Bliss to keep them any longer. Dr. Hamilton is reported to have declared that the case was hopeless, and he was not satisfied with its conduct, and was going to withdraw from consultation in it. This Dr. Bliss stoutly resisted, saying that he meant to stay to the end no matter what happened, and the worse the patient grew the more closely he should watch the case. The consulting physicians yielded and remained.

It is said, too, that also they wished to withdraw, but Dr. Bliss would not permit it, and prevented an open rupture of their relations. It is alleged further that they are remaining under press, and that great lack of cordiality characterizes their association with Dr. Bliss. It is thought, also, that Mrs. Garfield's evident confidence in Dr. Boynton, a homeopathist, had added nothing in the way of harmony.

Young Dr. Bliss is reported as saying to-day: "We have been very much worried at the attitude of the doctors. We have been criticised all over the country, and if we fail in this we are ruined. Even if Hamilton and Agnew thought there was an excuse for hauling off yesterday, I do not see why they should keep it up to-day."

The elder Bliss was asked to-day if both the consulting physicians would remain from this time on, simply remarked that he had requested them to remain for the present.

The tax paid is for Wisconsin business only, and is an increase of $14,123.41 on tax paid in August, 1880, indicating an increase in the company's business in this State during 1881 of $546,946.40.

Ice-cream or lemonade?"

"I'll order some of both," she said.
Heaven help the young man's "pile."

JOHN BROWN'S RAID.

An Interesting Account Given By a Kentucky Gunsmith Who Was Master Armorer at Harper's Ferry.

Learning that Mr. Ben Mills, the celebrated gun-maker of this city, was present at the raid of John Brown upon Harper's Ferry, in 1859, your correspondent called upon him and asked him to give his recollections of that noted event for the benefit of the Courier-Journal's readers. Mr. Mills is a New Yorker by birth, and came to Kentucky in 1838. He was born in 1810, and, though seventy-one years of age, is still hale and hearty and works daily at his trade of gunmaking. He learned his trade in Canada, coming thence to Kentucky and settling at May's Lick. At that place he worked for two years and then went to Stanford. He staid at Stanford four years and then moved to Harrodsburg. After being at Harrodsburg fourteen years he was, in 1858, tendered, by John B. Floyd, then Secretary of War, the position of Master Armorer at Harper's Ferry Armory. He accepted the position and proceeded to that place, taking charge in the month of November. Here he remained in charge until the raid of John Brown on Sunday night, October 17, 1859.

Mr. Mills' story, in his own words, is as follows:

"Before John Brown's raid, on several occasions he had visited the armory. I did not see him, but the foreman of the barrel department did. He did not, however, suspect anything, as he thought Brown, like many others, merely came there through curiosity to see the works and process of gun-making by machinery. Brown made his raid about twelve o'clock at night, but my quarters being distant about seven hundred yards, I knew nothing of the affair until next morning. The total number of his men was twenty-one. More than half of them were white. They made the attack in two divisions. That led by Brown, the largest squad, crossed from the Maryland side on the bridge over the Potomac. At the bridge was stationed a watchman of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, a negro named Haywood, a very trusty man. He was taken prisoner by Brown's squad, but, being greatly alarmed, broke away and started to run. He was fired upon by the squad and fell dead. After shooting Haywood they approached the armory gate and demanded that the watchman let them in. The watchman was not armed, and refused to admit them. They had crowbars and, placing them under the gate, lifted the hinges and entered. The gate watchman was taken prisoner, as also were the three other watchmen around the armory.

"The other squad crossed the Shenandoah bridge from the direction of Loudoun and captured the rifle factory, a half mile distant. After taking both factories, Brown took a few men with him and proceeded to Halltown, in Jefferson County, Va., the home of Colonel Lewis Washington, grand-nephew of George Washington. Colonel Washington was taken prisoner by Brown. The latter also took from the house a sword formerly worn by General Washington and buckled it on his person. Brown's men hitched up a team of six horses to a wagon, in which they rode back to the ferry, having Colonel Washington in charge. They also impressed several negroes belonging to Colonel Washington. On their way back they passed the plantation of Mr. John Alstadt, a noted farmer of that region. Several of Mr. Alstadt's negroes were compelled to join the party. By the time Brown returned it was daylight and the workmen were coming to the factories to commence work. As fast as they arrived the two squads captured them and put them into the armory yard, enjoining them to keep quiet. About two hundred men were employed at the works, but by the time seventy-five of them had been captured by Brown's parties the extraordinary affair got winded abroad, creating intense excitement. The balance of the workmen remained at home or congregated at a distance in excited knots.

"About sunrise a boy by the name of Kittemillar, son of the Armory Chief Clerk, arrived just as I was sitting down to breakfast with my family. I did not have the least suspicion of any trouble, and the news communicated to me was a great shock. On entering he exclaimed, 'Major, pa wants you to come down immediately; a mob has taken the armory.' I put on my hat, and, accompanied by the boy, walked quickly toward the armory. Going down, I met the Chief Clerk and Mr. Ball, Master Machinist. I inquired: 'Gentlemen, what is the matter?'

"'Mr. Kittemillar replied: 'A mob has taken the armory, and I think they are Abolitionists.'

"I told them it must be a lot of Irish who had been at work on the dam, and, getting on a spree, had concluded to capture the works.

"Mr. Kittemillar told me I was mistaken.

"Walking down High street we saw two men in the arsenal yards having guns in their hands. One was a white man, the other a mulatto. Ball asked me what we should do. Not suspecting any harm, I replied: Let's go and see what they want. We then went into the arsenal yard, approached the two armed men, and inquired what they wanted. The negro touched Kittsmillar on the shoulder and exclaimed: 'You are my prisoner!' The latter cursed the fellow, and ordered him to keep his hands off. The negro cocked his gun, a Sharp's rifle, leveled it, and said: 'Make another motion and I will blow you through.' The two men then ordered us into the armory yard. As we entered, Mr. Ball said to a man stationed as guard at the gate: 'Who is your commander?' The sentry pointed to an old man with gray locks, stooping down looking at something on the ground. 'That is the man,' said he. Brown, who was quite near, heard the remark and straightened up, exclaiming:

"'You have heard of John Brown, of Kansas?'

"Ball replied: 'I have.'

"'I am that man,' said Brown. 'I have come to free the negroes—peacefully if I can, forcibly if I must.'

"'Very well,' replied Ball.

"Brown said: 'Gentlemen, you can walk around the yard and enjoy yourselves. If either of you have a good able-bodied negro I will exchange you for him.'

"We replied: 'We are not allowed to have any negroes here.' We then ceased conversation with Brown.

"My wife, being a woman of considerable nerve, followed me down to the armory. She went up to Brown, accompanied by my daughter Lizzie, and asked him if she could send my breakfast.

"'Certainly,' said Brown, "if you want to, but I am going to furnish breakfast for all the prisoners.'

"I took a good look at Brown. He was an old looking man, fifty-nine years of age, and stood about five feet nine or ten inches. He had no teeth, and his hair was rather long. He had a piercing hazel eye, and his whole countenance was expressive of great determination. He was rather thin, and slender of build, with quite long legs. He stooped forward from the hips while walking. He wore a heavy beard; dressed in a light-colored frock coat. An otter-skin cap adorned his head, and the thick cap was the means of saving his life, afterwards, when the engine house was stormed by troops and Lieutenant Green struck him over the head with a sword.

"Chief Clerk Kittsmillar, Ball and myself then walked into an office near by. John Brown came in, accompanied by some of his followers. He made a proposition that we allow him to keep the armory, in return for which he would free every prisoner taken. The proposition was agreed to by Kittsmillar, who reduced it to writing. Ball had nothing to say, and I flatly refused. I told Brown I had no right to sign away Uncle Sam's property. The proposition also contemplated the assent of a number of prominent citizens. One of Brown's sons—he had two there—went out, accompanied by Kittsmillar, to obtain signatures. While gone on this errand a citizen, whose name I have forgotten, shot young Brown in the breast with buckshot. Kittsmillar ran away and left young Brown, who walked back to the yard and died within a few hours. When John Brown met his son he asked where was Kittsmillar. Young Brown replied that he did not come back, and said, 'I am shot.'

"Brown replied: 'My son, stand it as well as you can; I hope you may get well; if you die, you die honorably.'

"About this time a lively fusilade from the houses of citizens was commenced upon Brown's men, which was replied to by the Sharp's rifles of the latter. The first man killed was Mr. Burley, a livery stable-keeper. The firing got so heavy Brown found that he could not maintain himself in such an exposed position as the armory yard. Several of his men had already been killed. He went among the prisoners and selected eight of them as hostages, Colonel Lewis Washington, Mr. Alstadt, Mr. Ball, the Purser and myself being of the number. We were ordered into the engine-house, being accompanied by Brown and his men, who had all retreated from the outskirts of the town. The men seemed but little excited, and appeared to be under fine discipline. They seemed to have wonderful confidence in Brown.

"After our retreat to the engine-house the prisoners all got out of the yard. My son Charles, then a boy of fourteen, showed a number of citizens where a lot of guns were stored in the upper end of the armory. The citizens took the guns and used them during the fight. Having but little ammunition, however, they did little good. It was about ten o'clock in the morning when we went into the engine-house. A number of citizens gathered in front of the engine-house, and promiscuously around, and kept up a regular fusilade at our stronghold. Brown gave the order to his men not to fire at any one unless he had a gun; in that case to 'shoot him at once.' Most of the balls that came through the door from the outside seemed to be fired from squirrel rifles. The door, which was of one and a quarter inch plank, was soon riddled, hundreds of balls having passed through it.

"Brown, addressing us prisoners, said: 'Gentlemen, get in the safest place you can; I don't wish to hurt you, as you are the only breast works I have. Without you I would not last two minutes. I know my fate, my life would not be worth a straw.'

"During the firing through the door Brown's other son was shot and fell. He groaned heavily. His father told him to stand it bravely and make as little noise as possible.' He said: 'I have long since, myself, learned not to know what fear is.'

"This was evidently true, as he did not exhibit the least fear during the whole engagement.

"About this time Colonel Baylor, a prominent gentleman of the county, approached the engine-house with a flag of truce. He was permitted to to come up to the door, which was opened slightly. Colonel Baylor asked Brown if anything could be done to free the prisoners.

"Brown replied: 'Let me take my men and prisoners as far as the second lock on the Baltimore & Ohio Canal. There I will release the prisoners, and then me and Uncle Sam for it.'

"Colonel Baylor said: 'I cannot do it; I have no authority.'

"Brown replied: 'Very well.'

"Colonel Baylor then retired and the door was closed. By this time it was nearly night. During the fusilade I hugged a corner of the engine-house very affectionately, as did the rest of the prisoners. I amused myself—if it could be called amusement—watching the balls strike the wall after passing through the door.

"After dusk Captain Simms, a citizen of Frederick, approached the door with another flag of truce. He was accompanied by Colonel Baylor. Simms was admitted, and requested an armistice until morning. This Brown assented to, saying, 'My men shall not fire; can you keep yours from firing?'

"Simms replied, "I think I can; I'll try.'

"Simms and Baylor then retired.

"Brown, from his conversation and manner, evidently was anticipating volunteers all day, and appeared disappointed. If any one slept in the engine-house that night, I am not aware of it. Brown would not allow any light. His men sat around on the floor and against the walls, guns in hand, awaiting the developments that daylight would bring. Brown, at intervals, conversed in low tones with his men, as if trying to inspire them with renewed courage. He also talked with us prisoners, saying he was willing to march out with us all and release us at the second lock. When the subject of slavery was mentioned he lost all patience, declaring that the Southern people were making slaves of their brothers and kinsmen. We concluded among ourselves that he was crazy on that subject, and said to him that if he was taken prisoner we would not be in favor of hanging him. Brown's sons both died in the engine-house before morning.

"At daylight Captain J. E. B. Stewart, of the United States army (noted cavalry General in the Confederate army during the late war), arrived from Washington with a letter from Colonel Robert E. Lee, demanding the surrender of Brown and his men. By this time troops, both regular and malitia, had arrived from Washington, Baltimore and other places, to the number of about five hundred. Before Simms left the engine house he told Brown he was surrounded by five hundred men. It is impossible for you to get away. You had better make a treaty with Baylor, for now Colonel Lee is here, and he will go according to strict orders."

"Brown replied: 'We will sell them our lives as dear as possible.'

"Stewart approached, the door with a cheerful countenance and called for Brown, saying, 'I have a letter from Colonel Lee,' which he handed to Brown.

"The latter said: 'I have no glasses, and cannot read it; will you read it?'

"Stewart assented, and read the letter in a loud voice. The letter proposed to Brown that if he would surrender he would be kept in safety until orders were received from President Buchanan. This Brown flatly refused to do, saying: 'I won't do it; I know what my fate will be.' Stewart, looking at Brown, said: 'Captain Brown, I think I recognize you; your face is not unfamiliar. Where were you (naming the place and time)?'

"Brown—'I was not far off.'

"Not wishing to be shot at any longer, we prisoners requested Captain Stewart to see if he could not get some other terms. He consented and went back. After he left Brown said: 'If they get hold of me my life would not be worth a straw. I know just what they would do with me. They would kill me like a dog.' Brown and his men then went to work and barricaded the doors with the two engines.

"In a half hour Captain Stewart returned and informed Brown that Colonel Lee would not modify or change his demand. Stewart lifted his hat politely and bade Brown good-morning with the grace of a ball-room beau. Through the crack of the door from whore I stood I could see a squad of United States marines standing dressed in line on the lawn about twenty yards from the engine-house. They were commanded by Lieutenant Green. In a moment we heard the sound of their feet as they marched toward the engine-house. Brown's men commenced firing about the same time the marines opened fire. Some of the marines carried sledge-hammers with which to knock down the doors. The doors being strong, the blows rebounded, making no impression. The marines then retired, one of them being killed. Another was shot in the mouth, but he tied it with a handkerchief and kept his place in ranks. The marines then retired a few moments. At this juncture one of Brown's men shouted aloud: 'I surrender!'

"Brown exclaimed, 'Only one man surrenders.'

The marines marched up again and opened right and left to admit a company of about twenty citizens, who carried a long ladder as a battering-ram. The first blow made the gate give, the second knocked it in, the fastenings giving away. The marines rushed in with the bayonet, headed by Lieutenant Green, who was the first man across the threshold. Brown stood erect like a pillar, not a muscle moving. Green made a lunge at Brown, knocking him forward on his face upon the floor of brick. Leaning over the hose-cart, Green chopped Brown twice on the head. The thick otter-skin cap saved Brown's life, but he was left senseless. Green thought he had killed him, and I also thought the first lunge had gone through Brown's body. But it only struck him on the hip bone, knocking him down. We prisoners threw up our hands and told the marines we were prisoners. 'Take them out!' shouted Green. We rushed out, I in front. J. E. Stewart, standing at the door and recognizing me, said: 'He is right; let him go.' Some of Brown's men, after the fall of their leader, continued to struggle a moment or two. Several were bayoneted and the rest were taken prisoners. Brown was carried out and laid upon the lawn alongside the killed and wounded. The fight terminated about nine o'clock. Brown soon recovered consciousness and was taken into my office, where he was questioned by Governor Wise publicly. General Lee and most of the armory officers were present.

"The Governor said to Brown: 'I want to question you.'

"Brown replied: 'Very well; anything about myself I will tell you, but about others I will not.'

"Wise said: 'You are not bound to.'

"Brown replied: 'I am aware of it.' He then said to Governor Wise: 'The freedom of the slaves will all be brought about inside of ten years.'

"Wise said: 'I don't want to hear such talk.'

"'Mr. Brown,' said the Governor, 'did you, or did you not, take an inventory of the negroes of Jefferson County?'

"Brown replied: 'I did not, but it was taken.'

"A good deal of conversation followed which has escaped my memory. Several persons attempted to ask Brown questions, but Governor Wise waved his hand and said, 'Let me do the talking.'

"After the interview was over the Governor told Brown: 'I have a much better opinion of you than I expected I would have. I only regret that a man so brave, open and free should be engaged in such a thing as this.'

"To this Brown replied: 'There's where we differ.' Gov. Wise retired, Brown being left in the hands of the Sheriff, who also took the rest of the prisoners and carried them to Charleston and placed them in jail. The adjacent country was then scoured by bodies of citizens hunting for concealed arms, which it was rumored Brown's men had hid close by, in order to arm the negroes. A party, with Col. Washington's wagon, proceeded to the house that had been occupied by Brown, on Maryland Heights, about four miles distant. Brown and his men had all lived at this house, pretending to be miners. The party made a search and found 200 Sharp's rifles, 200 revolvers and 1,000 long pikes. I have now in my possession a rifle and pike. I also had one of the pistols, but during the late war the Michigan soldiers broke into my gun-shop at Harrodsburg and stole it.

"The trial and execution of John Brown and his men are matters of history, and it is not worth while for me to speak on that score. What I have related came under my own observation. I felt sorry for Brown's fate, regarding him as a crazy man on the subject of slavery."—Lexington (Ky.) Cor. Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Cool House and Dry Cellar.

Much comfort may be secured by keeping the house cool in the hot days. This may be done by closing all the windows about eight o'clock in the morning and opening them only after six in the evening; dark green window shades being inside of the white ones will keep out the heat of the sun, and the darkness will drive out the flies. Children and old persons suffer greatly if they cannot rest for an hour or two about midday, and in a cool, dark room, where there are no flies, an hour's rest for the weary mother and the young children may be easily secured. The windows may be opened at night when the air is cooler and less damp than in the day-time and thorough ventilation given. The condition of the cellar is much improved by the same treatment. If the cellar windows are open in the day-time and the warm air let in a large quantity of moisture comes in with the hot air and is deposited like dew on the cellar walls and floor. This encourages mold, and in a few days the cellar is impregnated with mildew. The cooler night air contains less moisture, and if a bushel of fresh lime is kept in the cellar it will absorb a great quantity of moisture from the air and keep the cellar dry. A bushel of lime weighing eighty pounds will absorb twenty-seven pounds of water before it becomes at all damp. A peck of it will absorb more than six pounds, and a peck is very manageable. When it is slaked down to a powder and appears very moist it can be taken away and fresh lime supplied. Ten cubic feet of air saturated with moisture until it begins to be deposited on the walls of a cool cellar may contain one cubic inch of water or half an ounce or thereabout. A cellar thirty by twenty and seven feet high contains 4,200 cubic feet, and may contain, dissolved in the air, about thirteen pounds, or nearly two gallons of water, when it begins to be deposited as dew on the walls at sixty degrees temperature. Half a bushel of lime will completely dry the air in a cellar of this size; but it is not requisite to dry it completely; all that is wanted is to absorb the surplus that cannot be held in the air at a temperature of forty-five or fifty degrees. Then the cellar will be practically dry and there will be no mold or moisture or earthy smell about it. This is of the utmost importance in dairies where milk, cream and butter are kept in cellars, and more so in regard to food. It is known that the spore of common mildew will produce germs that are found in the stomach and blood in certain diseases. It is quite logical to believe, then, that to eat musty or moldy food will be dangerous to health, and may produce serious diseases as surely as impure water will. Sometimes a cake taken from a damp cellar may be found, on breaking, to contain fine glutinous strings or threads which stretch from piece to piece. These threads are mold. Pies and bread are often imperceptibly moldy in warm, damp weather, and consequently dangerous to health. So that a damp cellar may be easily a source of unsuspected danger, and the dampness may be all due to an improper method of ventilation. The cellar should, then, never be ventilated in the day-time except in dry, cool weather, when it is perceptibly warmer than the outside air.—Cor. N. Y. Times.

A Freak of Imagination.

A dispensary case which the reporters were not allowed to get hold of created some stir a short time ago. The officer on the beat found the man in a half-fainting condition at the steps, and, ascertaining that he had been stabbed between the shoulders, lugged him in for treatment. The stranger's story, when he was sufficiently recovered to tell it, was to the effect that he had been sitting on a beer-keg outside a saloon, when he became drowsy and leaned forward in a half doze. Some one whom he could not identify, and, in fact, did not get a good view of, came up the street, and, in passing him, stabbed him in the back and made his escape. The wounded man at once started for the dispensary, but fainted from loss of blood on reaching the door. While the doctors were removing his clothing something dropped on the floor, which the quick eye of the peeler caught, and, as he stooped to pick it up, he remarked "the man has also been struck with a glass, and here's a piece of it." It did not prove to be glass, but a piece of ice, and further examination explained its presence. The patient was entirely unhurt, but had been made the victim of a practical joke. Seeing him dozing some wag had slipped the ice down his back and struck him between the shoulders. Suddenly aroused, and feeling the blow and the ice melting, he at once jumped to the conclusion that he was stabbed, and the force of imagination was such that he fainted and became sick at the stomach. Both he and the officer who had expatiated on the severity of the stab, looked rather crestfallen, and slid quietly out, while the physicians roared.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

—A sailor named Beauvais, twenty-two years of age, has been convicted in Paris of simulating railway accidents for the purpose of extorting money. His system was to lean on the door of a compartment, not properly closed or partially opened, by himself, and to pretend that his leg was sprained by falling, or by being pulled in by his fellow passengers. He would undergo an examination by the company's doctor, simulate great pain, and be awarded perhaps 60 or 100 francs compensation, while the guard would be fined for negligence. He practiced this trick five times in twelve days.

H. A. PATTERSON, P. M.

MILTON JUNCTION.

—Mrs. George Button has been very low with malarial fever for the past week with serious doubts as to her recovery. Dr. Coakley, of this place, and Dr. Whiting, of Janesville, are in close attendance.

—Mrs. S. W. Baker, who, since Thursday night last has been very near death's door from an over dose of morphine, is still alive, with about even chances for pulling through. There are perhaps few cases on record where a person has been saved after taking ten grains of morphine and the same had become circulated in the system, but Drs. Allen and Coakley, the physicians called, succeeded by administering a large amount of counter poison, in getting control of the morphine and thus have at least saved her life, although not yet out of danger.

—The threshing machines are busy at work, and the grain stacks are disappearing rapidly.

—Mr. Nelson Taylor and wife, of Edgerton, spent last Sunday in this village.

—Mrs. Thomas Morgan, of Manchester, Mich., and her daughter, Mrs. Carrie Wallace, of Milwaukee, have been spending some days in town, the guests of the Morgan house.

—The continued dry weather is drying up and maturing the tobacco crop especially the late setting. The crop in general has not attained more than half its usual growth and weight when ready for topping. Some crops of early set are finished.

—Mrs. Joseph Kidder has been quite sick for some days.

—The Indian Ford bridge is now completed, and travel, so long delayed, is resumed.

—Mr. R. G. Greenman delivered two carloads of coal to consumers on Friday last, at $8.25 per ton.

—Wednesday evening last the friends of Mr. J. B. Tracy, who has long been the efficient superintendent of the Congregational Sunday school in this village, gave him a pleasant social party at the residence of Mr. D. E. Thorpe, as a sort of farewell visit, Mr. Tracy being about to leave for Iowa, his future home.

—Mr. J. A. Smith, son-in-law of Mr. R. B. Hull, has taken up his residence in this village, having rented a house and moved into town last week.

—Mr. I. P. Morgan has just put on quite an addition to his house adjoining the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

—Mr. Jasper Davis has purchased the house and lot owned by George W. Barrett, opposite Merchants' row, in this village, and will take possession September 15.

—Mrs. Mattie C. Clarke and Mrs. Dr. Clarke, of Morgan Park, Ill., arrived here on Tuesday for a few weeks' visit.

—The finest affair of the season, in the way of church socials, came off on the evening of the 11th inst at the house of Joseph Carr, near Milton Junction, where about one hundred of Mr. and Mrs. Carr's friends from Milton and the Junction assembled to participate of ice cream and cake, and to enjoy the open air and in-door hospitality of their spacious house and grounds. The yard was lighted with Chinese lanterns, and with the moonlight above and the sunlight in our hearts, we had a very delightful time.

—Mrs. J. S. Mills has been on the sick list for some days past.

—The Express said last week that our Junction lumbermen must be expecting a large trade next fall, as they are receiving several carloads a day, while the fact is our Junction lumbermen would be happier if they could get lumber laid down here fast enough to fill the bills of current sales.

—The aid society of the S. D. B. church gave an ice cream festival in the lecture room on Tuesday night last. It was well patronized, nearly $20 being realized during the evening.

—A new operator by the name of Ott is at work on the night relief, for the Northwestern road.

—Clark Bros are putting up a substantial coal house near the old warehouse, in which to stow 150 tons of coal purchased some weeks ago.

—Considerable interest is centered in the selling of the mill property to-day, the future business of the institution of course depends largely on whose hands it goes into.

—The Sabbath school of the Seventh-Day Baptist church is to hold a picnic at Lakeview on Wednesday of next week. The friends of the school, and all interested, are cordially invited.

—The Rock County Fair will be held at Janesville September 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1881.

An Intricate Proposition.

"Did it ever occur to you, my dear, that a person going overland would have to mail two letters a day from the train in order to have one letter a day return to San Francisco?" asked Major Max the other evening after the cloth was removed from the table and his wife was pouring his glass of two-thirds benedictine and one-third curacoa, which the Major contended was the only civilized drink with which to prepare for the after-dinner cigar.

Mrs. Max passed the Major his cordial and waited a moment before replying: "Why, no; it seems to me that if a person traveling east mailed a letter each day by a westward-bound train, a letter would arrive here each day."

Mrs. Max answered cautiously, for while she knew that the Major pretended to deplore the fact that she was illogical, he really derived much comfort from his superior comprehension, and was somewhat addicted to studying out intricate propositions with which to puzzle the lady.

"You think so, do you?" queried the Major, as though about to be convinced by her, while in truth he only wanted her to commit herself more decidedly that his victory would be the more signal.

"Why, yes," Mrs. Max continued, somewhat assured, "if you mailed a letter on the first day out, it would get here the next day; if you mailed one the day following it would arrive here a day after the first, and the letters being mailed twenty-four hours apart would, of course, continue to arrive here a day apart. They couldn't grow farther apart on the road, could they, Major?"

Mrs. Max wound up this sequence of feminine logic with a triumphant accent, and felt sure she had posed the Major, for he did not reply until after lighting a cigar. Then he said, slowly: "You post a letter the first day out?"

"Yes."

"That letter arrives here the day after you leave?"

"Certainly. One day gone, one letter received."

"Exactly. Well, the next day—a little curacoa, straight, please—the next day you post another letter from the train, and ——"

"And that arrives here the day after the first, of course, making two days out and two letters received, and so on to New York. Eh, Major?"

If Mrs. Max had not been examining a new pattern of lace she had in her sleeves she might have noticed the satisfied smile the Major had as he leaned back in his chair and said: "The second day out you would be at Ogden?"

"Yes."

"Wouldn't it take as long for a letter to return to San Francisco as it had taken you to go to Ogden?"

"I suppose so."

"Then the second letter would arrive here two days after you arrived at Ogden and four days after you left here?"

Mrs. Max looked up and said, hesitatingly: "Well, I don't see how you make that out."

"I did not make it out, Mrs. Max, I only asked if I was right?"

"No, you are not; if you post a letter on a returning train each day I say that a letter must arrive here each day, and I don't care."

"Mrs. Max, how long does it take to go to New York?"

"Seven days, I suppose."

"Then a letter a day would be seven letters. You would post your sixth letter on your sixth day out, and it would take it six days more to return, being twelve days after you left here. Now as you had only mailed five letters before the one which arrived on the twelfth day, how could a letter a day have arrived?"

Mrs. Max thought a moment and then asked with considerable warmth: "Do you mean to say, Major Max, that if a person going to New York posts a letter on a San Francisco-bound train each day that it takes two weeks for all those letters to arrive here?"

"It certainly would," replied the Major, glowing comfortably behind his cigar. He knew Mrs. Max acknowledged her defeat by the way she rang for the tea, but she would not ask for further explanation, so the reader must figure out the proposition without further assistance than the Major's hints afford.—San Francisco Chronicle.

WIT AND WISDOM.

—We learn from an astronomical authority that the planet Herschel "bears the name" of the discoverer. It would take a strong telescope to see that name on the planet.—New Haven Register.

—"Sarah is not very saving; she allows too much to go to waist," remarked the fond Boston parent when he came into the room and saw his prospective son-in-law with his arms encircling his daughter.—Boston Globe.

—They were discussing the question whether one should say "I shall," or "I may." Said Mrs. Fogg, finally, "Sometimes one form is correct and sometimes the other. For example, I say, 'I shall go to the city to-morrow and I shall buy a new dress pattern,' and you say, 'Yes, dear, you may.'" Fogg had to admit that she was quite correct.—Boston Transcript.

—Speaking of pictures, did you ever look at a lot of cattle portraits in an agricultural magazine? And were you ever able to distinguish a grain of difference in—well say from 20 to 3,000 portraits of famous cows? Can any one make you believe that they are not all printed from the same cut? And the lithograph prints of famous trotting horses, do you not suppose that one horse stood for all the portraits? Now we don't say that all cattle look alike, nor all trotting horses, but we do say that nearly all portraits of quadrilateral cows and anatomical horses are just as nearly alike as human art can make them.—Burlington Hawkeye.

A Heart-Broken Canary.

Last autumn Mr. W. S. Sturgis came from Leicester, England, and brought with him a fine Belgian canary. Soon after his arrival he purchased a female for a mate, and the two birds lived together in great harmony. On Sunday of last week the female suddenly sickened and died. The Leicester bird appeared to grieve deeply over the loss of his mate, refusing all nourishment. Monday he was seen standing upon the edge of the bathing-tub in an attitude of grief, and, not long after, was found lying at full length in the water, dead, an undoubted case of suicide from grief.—Providence (R. I.) Journal.

—Logwood was first introduced into England in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, but as the dyers of that time only produced a fugitive color from it its use was forbidden by law, and it was ordered to be burned wherever found. This was before it was discovered what excellent port wine could be made from logwood.

A Baptist Minister's Experience.

I am a Baptist minister, and before I even thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine, but left a lucrative practice for my present profession, 40 years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy. "THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL cured me." I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas' Eclectric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria, and "Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured them," and if taken in time it will cure seven times out of ten. I am confident it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough, and if anyone will take a small teaspoon and a half fill it with the Oil, and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and draw the Oil out of the spoon into the head by sniffing as hard as they can until the oil falls over into the throat, and practice that twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure their catarrh. For deafness and earache it has done wonders to my certain knowledge. It is the only medicine that I have ever felt like recommending, and I am very anxious to see it in every place, for I tell you that I would not be without it in my house for any consideration. I am now suffering with a pain like rheumatism in my right limb, and nothing relieves me like Thomas' Eclectric Oil.

FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY

SOLD IN PACKAGES A YEAR

AND SPERMATORRHŒA.

A valuable Discovery and New Departure in Medical Science, an entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent Cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz: Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease, acting by Absorption, and exerting its specific influence on the Seminal Vesicles, Ejaculatory Ducts, Prostate Gland, and Urethra. The use of the Remedy is attended with no pain or inconvenience, and does not interfere with the ordinary pursuits of life; it is quickly dissolved and soon absorbed, producing an immediate soothing and restorative effect upon the sexual and nervous organizations wrecked from self-abuse and excesses, stopping the drain from the system, restoring the mind to health and sound memory, removing the Dimness of Sight, Nervous Debility, Confusion of Ideas, Aversion to Society, etc., etc., and the appearance of premature old age usually accompanying this trouble, and restoring perfect Sexual Vigor, where it has been dormant for years. This mode of treatment has stood the test in very severe cases, and is now a pronounced success. Drugs are too much prescribed in these troubles, and, as many can bear witness to, with but little if any permanent good. There is no Nonsense about this Preparation. Practical observation enables us to positively guarantee that it will give satisfaction. During the eight years that it has been in general use, we have thousands of testimonials as to its value, and it is now conceded by the Medical Profession to be the most rational means yet discovered of reaching and curing this very prevalent trouble, that is well known to be the cause of untold misery to so many, and upon whom quacks prey with their useless nostrums and big fees. The Remedy is put up in neat boxes, of three sizes. No. 1, (enough to last a month,) $3; No. 2, (sufficient to effect a permanent cure, unless in severe cases,) $5; No. 3, lasting over three months, will stop emissions and restore vigor in the worst cases,) $7. Sent by mail, sealed, in plain wrappers. Full DIRECTIONS for using will accompany EACH BOX.

Send for Sealed Descriptive Pamphlets giving Anatomical Illustrations and Testimony, which will convince the most skeptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sold ONLY by

Has been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess-work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or cure everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call and investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for yourselves; it will cost nothing as consultation is free. BRIEFLETS.

—Refreshing rain last night.

—The Oak Leaves defeated the First Warders this morning by a score of 8 to 5.

—The Congregational church folk hold their usual prayer meeting this evening at 7:45 at the church.

—The Coaching club's hop, which was arranged for this evening at Cannon's hall, is declared off.

—There was a pleasant lawn party last evening at the home of E. Roof, it being under the auspices of the First Methodist church.

—A union service is being arranged to be held at the Congregational church Sunday evening, at which several speakers are to give thoughts and experiences arising from the late Sunday school assembly at Madison.

—A number of dry goods salesmen are required by James Morgan, Milwaukee. Young men speaking German and English preferred. Apply, stating experience and salary expected to commence.

—In the matter of opening up Park avenue to High street, the only property on which an agreement could not be reached was that owned by Mrs. Collins. A jury was called before Justice Prichard yesterday, and the property was condemned, and the damages fixed at $350.

—Peter Beaver, the young man charged with stealing about $30 from his employer Mr. Grundy, had a trial by jury in the Municipal Court yesterday afternoon, which resulted in his being found guilty. He has not been sentenced yet.

—The Kansas City Journal says: "Heywood's Mastodon minstrel troupe played to a large audience at the opera house last night, and to say that the audience was pleased would faintly express it. They were deserving of special praise." Those who attend the promised entertainment at the Opera house next Saturday evening can therefore expect a treat.

—The Chicago Times thus speaks of Miss May Phœnix, one of the Peerless Quartette Club, who are to give a concert here next Monday evening: "Miss May Phœnix, the promising contralto, gave a song recital at Hershey hall. The programme though very exacting, was performed in a manner eminently creditable to the ambitious young singer. Miss Phœnix is rapidly gaining an enviable reputation as a church and concert singer."

—A son of Patrick Hayes, living this side of Milton, and aged about eight or nine years, fell from a loaded wagon yesterday afternoon, both wheels of which passed over him, injuring him quite severely, and yet in view of all the circumstances it is a marvel that he escaped death. One of the boy's ears was so bruised and cut that it was almost entirely off, and one of his legs was very badly bruised. Dr. St. John was called and sewed on the ear and attended to the other wounds.

—Charles S. Mengel, the President of the Coaching club, was this afternoon brought into the Municipal Court on a charge of assaulting Will Palmer yesterday. He pleaded guilty, and only sufficient evidence was taken to show the nature of the assault. From the evidence it did not appear that there was any provocation for the assault, and no circumstances were brought out in mitigation of the offense. Judge Patton fined the accused $15 and costs, the total bill being $23, which he settled by cash.

DEATH OF MR. BLOOD.

The news of the death of Mr. F. F. Blood, of the town of Janesville, will come with sad surprise to his many friends. Last Saturday night he fell down the cellar stairs at his house, breaking his thigh, and causing other injuries which, to a person of his age, were especially serious, but which at the time did not appear to be immediately dangerous to life. Last night he began to grow much worse, and despite the most skillful attempts to rally him, he sank rapidly, and this forenoon death ended the struggle.

The deceased was a native of New Hampshire, and settled in this county in 1855. He had reached the age of about 74 years, and by his long residence here had gained the respect and esteem of a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Besides the wife, who is herself very enfeebled in health, he leaves several children, Mrs. David Fifield, of this city, being his daughter, and there being two sons, Mr. Albert C. Blood, of Milwaukee, and Mr. Warren Blood, of Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Blood arrived this morning from Milwaukee, and the other son has been informed by telegraph. The sudden demise of so estimable a citizen is greatly to be lamented, and will call forth a general feeling of sympathy for the immediate relatives.

LAID AT REST.

The funeral services of the late Rev S. C. Burnham, were held this afternoon, there being brief services at the house, followed by the more public service at Court Street church, with which deceased had been so long and actively connected. There was a very large attendance of sympathizing friends, among them being a large representation of the Odd Fellows, of which order he was a member. Among the floral tributes was a beautiful pyramid upon which appeared the emblems of the order, and like emblems appeared upon the casket in which the remains were placed. The services at the church were very impressive and tender. Appropriate music was rendered by a quartet consisting of Mrs. St. John, Miss Josslyn, and Messrs. N. Smith and Clarence Clark, with Miss Pond as organist. Rev. O. A. Curtis was the officiating clergyman. The pall bearers were Messrs. S. D. Conant, A. Phelps, M. S. Prichard, Volney Atwood, J. Howland, and S. Holdredge. The remains were taken to Oak Hill cemetery and there laid at rest, the service at the grave being in accordance with the beautiful ritual of the order to which he belonged, Rev. G. W. Lawrence serving as the chaplain.

MANUFACTURING INTERESTS.

Meeting of Business Men Desirous of Fostering and Increasing Janesville's Industries.

Last evening a number of the business men and citizens of Janesville gathered at the council chamber to talk over the manufacturing interests of the city, and especially to take some initiatory action in regard to the Harris works. Among those present were Wm. A. Lawrence, Dr. Henry Palmer, A. P. Lovejoy, S. C. Cobb, Pliny Norcross, L. L. Robinson James Harris, H. G. Richwald, O. F. Nowlan, J. D. Rexford, N. O. Clark Isaac Farnsworth, J. B. Crosby, Hiram Merrill, W. T. Vankirk, R. Valentine, F. C. Cook, and E. W. Lowell.

Wm. A. Lawrence called the meeting to order, and on his motion Dr. Henry Palmer was chosen Chairman, and Howard W. Tilton, Secretary. Dr. Palmer read the following call which was the occasion of the meeting:

The Harris manufacturing company, having entered into stipulations whereby, they are obliged to close their works and settle up their business, and deeming it highly important to the best interests of Janesville that the business should continue, and they having proposed to sell out their entire works and business at less than one-half its actual cost to a new organization, and among its stockholders are those who would subscribe for at least one-half of the stock of such new organization, we suggest that the business men of Janesville meet at the City Council room on Wednesday evening August 17th, at half past seven o'clock for the purpose of considering their proposition and taking such action thereupon as may be deemed advisable.

Signed, HENRY PALMER,
HIRAM MERRILL,
WM. A. LAWRENCE,
JOHN WATSON,
M. C. SMITH,
W. T. VANKIRK.

Dr. Palmer made a brief, earnest appeal in behalf of the manufacturing enterprises of Janesville. He said that the citizens could not afford to let an interest of this kind go down. Manufactories were necessary in order to keep Janesville up. This was the only reason Rockford led us. He had been impressed, while visiting that city, at the unanimity of purpose among all classes of citizens there to sustain manufacturing enterprises. This year there was in that place $250,000 new capital put into various manufacturing enterprises, almost every individual putting in something. It would be a sad detriment to Janesville to allow the Harris works to be closed.

Mr. J. B. Crosby explained the affairs of the company somewhat, and the necessity of organizing a new company. His health was such that he could not retain so large an interest as to demand his personal management of the business, but he would take a fair amount of stock, and as far as able would assist in making a new company successful, as the old one had been. In his opinion the agricultural interests could not support here a city of more than 7,000, and if the factories now in operation here were taken out of Janesville, the population would shrink one-third, and the property almost one-half. The facilities for manufacturing here were as good or better than at Rockford, as employes can live cheaper here. By fostering manufactories the population here could easily be increased to 20,000. If business men would only look at the matter aright they would put from 15 to 20 per cent of their money into manufacturing. It was necessary in accordance with the agreement of the old company that the affairs should be closed up within sixty or ninety days, and unless a new company was organized the Harris works would be idle. The old company had done well, and would be able not only to return to the stockholders the amount of their investment, but a liberal interest beside, and the old stockholders stood willing to invest liberally in a new company.

Pliny Norcross spoke in favor of pushing the Harris works and not allowing the wheels to stop a minute. He advised the appointment of a committee to look over the affairs of the old company, with the consent of the officers, and in accordance with their request, and report at a future meeting.

Mr. Rexford suggested that the committee report on the value of the buildings, machinery, patents, etc., offered for sale to the new company.

Mr. Merrill added that such a committee should gather all the facts possible concerning the matter, and how the business had paid, and what the prospects were.

S. C. Cobb, on being called out, gave some valuable information concerning the enterprise, what had been done, and what could be done. In his opinion there was no trouble at all in a new company going right ahead, and doing a large and profitable business, with $100,000 capital, and employing at least 100 men steadily. He gave facts and figures concerning harrows, seeders, drills, binders, harvestors, mowers, all machines for the manufacture of which the works were well fitted. He would stay by the new company, if wanted, and was confident of continued success.

Many interesting and encouraging facts and figures were brought out, and a committee appointed, consisting of Pliny Norcross, Hiram Merrill, and Wm. A. Lawrence, to gather still further facts to present to a future meeting. Adjournment was then taken to meet at the call of the chairman.

PERSONAL.

—C. E. Moseley and family have returned from the east.

—Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Conrad are back from the Dells. They were wonderfully pleased with their trip.

—Dr. Sutherland is reported as much better to-day, and his speedy recovery is hoped for.

—Mr. Halverson, who went from Rock county to Kansas some ten years ago, is in the city the guest of Sheriff Skavlem.

—Dr. Presby, of Washington, is in the city, the guest of his brother-in-law, A. A. Jackson.

—D. W. Kolle, who about ten days ago entered the employ of a Harvard jeweler, has returned, not being satisfied with the position. He is an excellent watchmaker, and will not remain idle long.

—J. I. Shea, the popular cutter for E. T. Foote, has returned from his eastern trip. He used his eyes well while away, and posted up on all the latest and noblest details in gents' dress.

—Hiram Bump, J. C. Metcalf and A. P. Bennett are enjoying their Lake Superior trip hugely. When last heard from they were on board the City of Duluth, on Lake Superior, twelve hours out from Prince Arthur's landing, out of sight of land, and wearing their overcoats. They expect to return home the first of next week.

—From a letter just received from Rockford, we learn that Miss Lucy L Barrett, the young elocutionist, who has on several occasions so charmed Janesville audiences, is very low with typhoid fever, with the chances of recovery rather against her.

Howe Scales are guaranteed in every particular to be the best made. BORDEN, SELLECK & Co., General Agents, Chicago, Ill. 1

CAMPANINI.

Probability that the Great Artist will Return.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—The friends of Campanini, the renowned tenor, and lovers of Italian opera generally, will be pleased to learn that there is a prospect that gentleman's appearance in this country again this fall and winter. When he let the United States this summer, it was with the intention of settling down quietly at his home at Parma for a year or so, devoting his attention to domestic rather than professional matters, but at the same time developing his part in Baito's new opera, which was written for him. Within the past few weeks, however, Col. Mapleson has been negotiating with Campanini, together with Lucca, Tremelli, and other lights of the lyric stage, with the view to securing them for the next season in America. Whether he is successful with Campanini rests entirely with the manager himself, for according to a letter just received, he has the tenor's terms in his possession, to accept or reject as he deems advisable. Knowing as he does Campanini's great popularity in this country, it is not at all likely that Colonel Mapleson will let the opportunity of securing him pass, no matter what the monetary consideration may be.
